No

Section II - Topic Details

Describe the preventive service:

What is the main beneficial outcome of the preventive service?

Could harms be caused by widespread use of the preventive service? If so, describe.

Describe the condition or disease to be prevented:

--

	Yes	No
Does the condition or disease affect large numbers of women in the general population ?
Are women disproportionately or uniquely affected by the condition or disease?*
Does preventing the condition lead to improved health outcomes† and/or mortality?

*Exclusive to women (e.g., cervical cancer); higher impact in women (e.g., osteoporosis); manifested differently in women (e.g., cardiovascular disease).

†Conditions experienced by patients, not lab tests for example.

Section III - Rationale

Describe the target population for the preventive service:

Is the preventive service specific to defined age groups, reproductive status (e.g. pregnant, postmenopausal), risk groups, or other categories?

Do specific populations require additional considerations because of their higher risk or prevalence of the condition, limits to health care access, societal disparities that impact health, or other factors? If so, describe the populations.

Section IV - Supporting Documentation

Please list evidence that supports your topic nomination and describe how the quality and strength of evidence regarding preventing the condition is supportive of this topic. Please use specific citations and provide a link to the article or abstract. Documentation must be research published in peer-reviewed journals.

Thank you for your New Topic Nomination. Your nomination will be considered, but you will not receive an individualized response. Note that you will not receive an email confirmation. Please only submit your nomination form one time.
